A market is being held in the grounds of the castle. Local people come to buy food. They are entertained by a stilt-walker and a sword swallower. Inside the castle, the lord greets his cousin who has come to visit. He wants his daughter to marry the lord's son and has brought expensive gifts. In the chapel the priest tries to teach a class of children, but they do not listen!

A huge feast is being held in the Great Hall. The lord and lady sit at the head of the table. They and their guests are entertained by jesters and acrobats. There is chaos in the kitchen as the cooks prepare the food. The servants scurry across the inner bailey in the rain to serve the guests. Upstairs, the maids try on the lady's clothes.
